THE GIFT OF CORN.

A Legend Telling How Corn Was Given to the Red Men.

The following legend, which professes to tell how that valuable plant maize, or Indian corn, was given to the Indians, has much more purpose than a story from the "Arabian Nights." It was related by Nabunwa to Mr. George Johnston. When the Ottawas were driven from the beautiful Manitowish islands, in Lake Huron, by the Iroquois, their magician, Mass-wa-we-in-i, remained behind.

One day Mass-wa-we-in-i was crossing a wide plain, when he was accosted by a little man with a red feather on his head.

"Where are you going?" asked the little man, cheerily, and invited the magician to smoke with him. "Pray," said he, as they smoked, "wherein does your strength lie?"

"My strength," answered Mass-wa-we-in-i, "is that of the human family, no more."

"We must wrestle," said the man of the red feather. "If you should make me fall, you will say to me, 'I have thrown you, Wa-go-ma-na.'"

So they wrestled, and for a time the strife was doubtful, and Mass-wa-we-in-i feared for himself, the little man, however, but at length he threw him to the ground.

"I have thrown you, Wa-go-ma-na!" he cried, and at that instant his opponent vanished into the earth. The little man disappeared. Mass-wa-we-in-i discovered a crooked ear of maundina (Indian corn) lying on the ground, with the usual red, hairy tassel at the top. While he gazed he heard a voice say: "Divest me of my covering and reveal my body. Separate me into parts, and cast me upon the plain. Return then in one moon."

Mass-wa-we-in-i obeyed these directions, and when, at the expiration of the moon, he came again to the wrestling place, he found the spikes and blades of young corn, and where he had thrown the crooked pumpkin vines were growing luxuriantly.

A voice addressed him from the cornfield. "Mass-wa-we-in-i, you conquered me. Had you not done so, your life would have been forfeited. Victory has crowned your strength, and from henceforth my body shall give nourishment to the human race."

Thus the Ottawas received the gift of corn, and they have ever been noted for their fine crops of this grain, and from their custom of trading in Indian corn this tribe was called Ottawas--Youths' Companion.

AMERICAN LUGGAGE.

An English Writer Discusses Marriage, Hunting, Yankee Belles, and the Providence of the Empire.

Millions and millions of Americans, who trust for setting off their attractions in a cis-Atlantic acquaintance with the taste of purchasers. American girls are often and undeniably extremely pretty. But, like our spinster acquaintances in the lines of their figures, they rather resemble the statue of the Venetian colonnade. And, like the blooming roses of Sharon, there is a transiency in their complexions which portends premature fading and decay. So, when they go on the war trail with carte blanche from the government--or governor--very sensibly knowing supplies to be inexhaustible, they spare nothing in the shape of stores or ammunition. From the simple extravagant breakfast neglige to the elaborate ball dress at night, they may go through half a dozen changes of raiment. They are as fastidious as to swift succession of fresh toilets as the guests of the late empire at Compiegne. They delight in the exquisite delicate shades which are contaminated and ruined by contact with the material, and their watchword, like that of a revolving old border family, is: "Ready, ay, ready." At Homburg or Carlsbad, at Brussels or Paris, they may be engaged in a campaign at the shortest notice, which should be short, sharp and decisive. Hence those gigantic packing cases, with the cubic contents of a grand piano over which the luckless porters are groaning and sweating. We solemnly give our word of honor that while waiting only the other night for the extraction of two modest portmanteaus we counted sixteen such aerophages, made to a

AUSTRALIAN FEDERATION.

A Step Demanded by Geographical Situation and Commercial Economy.

The proposition of the Hon. Henry Parkes, of New South Wales, for the establishment of an Australian federation is another evidence of the drift of sentiment in that part of the world. In 1885, it will be remembered, the British Parliament established the Federal Council for Australia, in which each colony had two representatives. This council was given power to regulate the fisheries, enforce the degrees of the colony courts, and to consider such matters as might be referred to it by the colony legislatures. New South Wales and New Zealand refused to join the union, and, as the former is the oldest and richest colony, the act may be set down as a failure.

What is now demanded is not a council, but a federated union, with a genuine legislative body on the plan of the Dominion of Canada. This is Australia's manifest destiny. Geographical situation and commercial economy certainly demand it. At present this group of colonies are cutting their own throats by levying tariff duties against each other's products just as New York and New Jersey, or Connecticut and Massachusetts did in the time of the United States confederation. One of the most important outcomes of the Home Rule agitation in England has been the tremendous impetus given to the federal idea. Men who have always made a fetish of their own independence, and who are now ready to sacrifice it to a study of what they mean and what they can accomplish. What is called colonial federation, a union of all the British possessions as a means of establishing closer relations with the mother country, is largely the fruit of Tory contemplation of those questions of government involved in a Dublin Parliament. Says an English Unionist who rejects Gladstonian and imperialist dogma: "The federal system, which was first introduced in the United States and has since been modified in other countries, especially in Germany, seems to me one of the greatest discoveries ever made, and, as an important factor in human happiness, which can not possibly be exaggerated. He even hints that federation is the true solution of the Balkan peninsula dispute, and that there are Englishmen of both parties ready to favor such a political consummation. It does not take an over-sharp eye to see that the colonies of Australia, when they ask for a federal union, will find few obstacles placed in the path of their ambition and true welfare--Springfield (Mass.) Republican.

RUSSIAN DISCIPLINE.

It Beats the Boasted German Army Article All Hollow.

A German was boasting in the presence of some Russians about the obedience and discipline of the German army, citing numerous instances from the war between France and Germany.

"Gentlemen," replied one of the Russians, "what you say about the discipline in the German army amounts to nothing at all when compared with what occurs continually in the Russian army. But I will merely recite one instance of what occurred at the beginning of the reign of the Czar Nicholas, when the discipline in the Russian army was comparatively lax. At that time, before the telegraph was discovered, the Russians used signal stations, which were a few miles apart. The soldier made a signal which was repeated by the soldier at the next station, and thus the news was conveyed thousands of miles.

"One day a soldier at a station near St. Petersburg did not see the signal in time, and, deprecating the punishment that awaited him for negligence, deliberately hung himself on the signal tower.

The soldier at the next station mistook this for a signal, so he deliberately and promptly hung himself, also. In consequence of the discipline which prevails in the Russian army, next day it was discovered that all the soldiers at the signal stations from St. Petersburg to Warsaw had hung themselves on their signal towers. Of course a much stricter discipline prevails at present, and--

"That will do," replied the German, "I give it up."--Texas Sittings.

The naval authorities in England who have advocated big guns are lamenting under a huge wet blanket. Two 11-ton guns were constructed for the warship Victoria, at a cost of $55,000 each, with an additional cost of $100,000 for cartridges and machinery to work them. They were built to throw projectiles weighing 1,500 pounds each. While being tested, both guns collapsed.

I have been a sufferer from weakness for eight years and tried many remedies that did me no good. My father got me to try Bull's Sarsaparilla and before I had taken a half bottle I felt a great deal better. I now enjoy a regularity of habit that has not been the case for many years.

A PROFITABLE SCHEME.

An Ostled Man Makes a Proposition to Chicago Broker.

John W. Haglin, the well-known Chicago Board of Trade man, was sitting in his parlor, when there came a man who declared that he must see him on most important business. He was admitted, and in three walked one of the worst-looking tramps that has ever made the lake-front look like a paradise for the shufflers.

"What can I do for you?" Mr. Haglin asked, looking up in surprise.

"You can do me a great favor, sir, and it shall not cost you a cent. I am the ostled man."

"What a moment, my dear sir. Do not let your surprise override your better judgment. I have been going all over the country as the ostled man, and to-night I have a special favor to ask of you. I have a small amount of money, and I want to invest it in a profitable scheme."

"Well, but what have I got to do with it?"

"Nothing at all except this: Those men have gone back on me--tried to beat me. In fact, with a small amount of money, I have made a small fortune. I want to give you fifty cents--hold on, sir, hold on. If you let your temper--well, hold on--oh, I'll go out, but let me say you lack enterprise. I'm going, I tell you."--Arkansas Traveler.

CREMATION IN SIAM.

A Country Where It is Cheaper to Live Than to Die.

Siam is the land of cremation. It costs more money to die there than to live, and the funerals of our Congressmen, which are paid for at extravagant rates by the Government, cost little in comparison with that of the Siamese noble. When a King dies in Siam the whole nation takes part in the funeral, and a million dollars and upward are sometimes spent in the turning of the royal embalmed body into ashes. The last Queen who died at Bangkok was seated in a golden urn for a number of months after her death, and the foreign merchants in Siam brought thousands of dollars' worth of goods from Europe and China for the King to give as presents to those who came to the funeral. A great pile of palaces with roofs covered with people was built for her, and the funeral car was overlaid with pure gold and set with jewels. This car was six stories high, and it was surrounded by tiers of golden umbrellas. All the foreign diplomats attended the burning, and there was a tiger fight, a lion dance, and a tournament among the celebrities. The King lighted the fire at six p. m., and he gave presents of gold and silver, as well as a dinner, to the men of the funeral. It took a full week to perform the ceremonies, and at the close the ashes were taken in a royal barge and strewn upon the waters of the Menam river.--Philadelphia Telegraph.

"Tried all the Time."

Say many poor men and women, who seem overworked, or are debilitated by change of season, climate or life. If you could read the hundreds of letters praising Hood's Sarsaparilla which come from people whom it has restored to health, you would be convinced of its merits. As this is impossible, why not try Hood's Sarsaparilla yourself and thus realize its benefits? It will tone and build up your system, give you a good appetite, overcome that tired feeling and make you feel, as one woman expressed it, "like a new creature."

"Count that day lost whose slow descending view from thy hand no worthy action."

For renovating the system, eliminating all poisons from the blood, whether of scrofulous or malarial origin, S. S. S. has won the name of "Golden Liquid." To woman it imparts freshness of complexion, beauty of form and elasticity of step. This is the record of a purely vegetable remedy whose fame is widespread over two continents; which has retained its popularity for over half a century--its demand increasing at home, and orders coming for it where the English tongue is never spoken. This speaks volumes for its efficacy.

Swift's Specific (S. S. IN THE MEAT MARKET.

Old Friends Meet by Accident and Indulge in a Lively Discussion.

"Tell me," said the Spring Chicken to the Sausage, "is that legend fastened to you correct? Are you really a genuine Country Sausage?"

"O yes," answered the Sausage, "the butcher is not feeling his trade in my case. I was brought up in the country."

"Indeed! Were you always known as Sausage in your former home?"

"O no! I was called Fido there."

"Fido! Did you come from Long Island?"

"Yes, from the Ketchikan Hawkins Griffin farm, west of Aguebogus."

"Well, well! So you are old Fido. And you don't know me. I was born on that farm the same spring that you were."

"I believe you are old Mrs. Peck," said the Sausage, looking closely at the Spring Chicken, "and how are you now, Mrs. Peck?"

"To tell the truth I'm feeling tough. But how are you?"

"Fine," replied the Sausage, "but I've been a good deal out of late--more than any one would think."
